The twelve units in this Workbook will help you

- consolidate your grammar
- increase your vocabulary
- use functional language appropriately
- develop your reading skills.

Each unit has four parts.

Grammar

The grammar section contains a variety of exercises which will give you extra practice of the grammar in the Student's Book.

Vocabulary

The vocabulary section contains exercises which revise and extend the topic vocabulary in the Student's Book. In some units there are exercises on topic-related idioms. There are also exercises NV which introduce and practise new vocabulary related to the general topic area.

Language in action

The exercises in this section give extra practice in the functional language which you have studied in the Student's Book.

Read for pleasure

This section contains a variety of authentic texts, from poems and newspaper articles to extracts from novels and quotations. The main aim of this section is for you to read and enjoy the texts.

How to use this workbook: a step by step guide

This Workbook can be used alongside the Student's Book as a source of supplementary classroom material. It can also be used for self-study. All the activities have been designed so that they can be used by people working on their own.

Grammar

The exercises in this section give you extra practice of the grammar in the Student's Book. We suggest that you do the exercises here after you have studied the grammar point in class. In some of the exercises there are personal questions. As these answers are personal to you, they will help you remember the grammar you have studied. Don't forget to refer to the Language commentary in the Student's Book.

Study tip

- Don't try to do all the grammar exercises at once. Limit yourself to one section at a time.
- Check your answers to each exercise in a section before you go on to the next exercise.
- Do the grammar sections in different ways. If you feel confident about a language point, you could use the grammar exercises as a test to see how much you know. Then if you make mistakes you can re-read the Language commentary in the Student's Book. If you feel less confident about a language point, you could look at the Language commentary before you do the exercises.
- Don't work through the exercises in order. The grammar exercises always come first in each unit, but it is a good idea to mix the type of exercises you do. Do a grammar exercise followed by a vocabulary exercise.
- Answer the personal questions in as much detail as you can. If you like, do them a few days after the other exercise and compare answers with a partner.

Vocabulary

The exercises in this section recycle and extend the topic vocabulary you have studied in the Student's Book and introduce and practise new vocabulary.

We suggest that you do the topic vocabulary exercises after you have studied the topic vocabulary in class. The exercises which check the vocabulary in the Student's Book always come first in the section and have a page reference for the Student's Book. These revision exercises are followed by exercises on new vocabulary NV. The new vocabulary is related to the topic vocabulary in the unit and builds on what you have already studied. We suggest that you always do these exercises in the order in which they appear. This is because the first exercises present the new vocabulary and the later exercises practise it. Use a dictionary to check meanings where necessary, and always check your answers before you do the next sections.

Some units also contain exercises on idioms. They can be done at any time.

Study tip

- Don't always do the topic vocabulary exercises immediately after you have studied the vocabulary in class. Test yourself a few days later or write the answers in pencil on a separate piece of paper and test yourself again in a few weeks' time.
- Write vocabulary in a separate notebook from your grammar notes. Organize your vocabulary in an appropriate way and add any new vocabulary from the Workbook to your lists.
- There are many different ways of organizing and recording vocabulary which you could try.
 - By topic Food: meat, vegetables, fish
 - groups Ways of cooking: steam, boil, barbecue
 - synonyms prepare = get ready
 - opposites heat (vb) < > cool

- With the word in English in one column and the translation next to it.
- On index cards with the word on one side and translation, pronunciation and example sentences on the other.

steam (n/vb)	/sti:m/ vapor, cocinar al vapor noun: The kitchen was full of steam. verb: Steam the fish for about ten minutes.
------------------------	---

- Review your vocabulary regularly. Find the method which is best for you.
 - Write new words on a piece of paper and stick them where you will see them (in the house, car, office ...)
 - Make a tape of the new words with their meaning and test yourself while you are driving, jogging, etc.
 - Store your vocabulary on index cards in a box and test yourself every day. When you know a word, put the card to the back. Keep the words you don't know at the front until you can remember them.
 - Test a classmate by e-mail.

Remember, three new words a day is more than 1,000 words a year!

Language in action

The exercises here give you extra practice in the functional language in the Student's Book. Do these exercises after you have studied the functional language in class. Look at the lists of expressions you noted in class before you do the exercises.

Study tip

- Make a note of the functional language in a separate section of your notebook from your grammar notes.
- Test yourself regularly.
- If you think you need more practice, work with a friend. You could write short dialogues and make your own gap-fill exercises; you could practise using the language in as many different situations as you can.

Read for pleasure

This section contains a variety of authentic texts which we hope you will find interesting and enjoy reading. They are taken from lots of different sources: internet sites, travel books, short stories and newspapers. Some of them have a similar topic to the rest of the unit, others include examples of grammar points. The main aim is for you to read and enjoy the texts.

The questions which accompany the texts sometimes check general comprehension but often simply ask for your reaction to what you have read. If you have time and would like to look at the texts in more detail, you could follow these tips.

Study tip

- Read the texts the first time for general comprehension. Try to guess the meaning of any words you don't know from their context.
- Limit the number of words you look up in a dictionary. Don't look up every word you don't know. Look up words whose meanings you can't guess and which you think are important. We also recommend that you buy an English-English dictionary.
- Make a note of any useful vocabulary in your vocabulary notebook and revise it regularly

Idioms list

At the back of the book there is a complete list of the idioms that appear in the Vocabulary sections. Use this to check meanings and to find other examples of the idioms used in context. Don't try to use these idioms too often in your own speaking and writing; it is more important that you understand what they mean than that you use them.

Finally, we hope that you will enjoy using this Workbook!

Read for pleasure

- 1 Here are some extracts from an article which suggests that writing poetry can be a better cure for depression than drugs. When you have read the extracts, you could write a poem of your own in one of the ways the writer suggests.

Forget Prozac, write a poem instead

-  Write a short poem of no more than 12 lines about a negative emotion, such as sadness or fear, using the last two lines of the poem to change that emotion into something positive.
-  Select an everyday object, such as a key or an onion, and write about the associations you have with that object.
-  Describe your perfect day, from the moment you wake to when you go to bed.
-  Think of a word that describes what is great about you, then write down all the words that you associate with this word. Put all these words together to form a poem.
-  Complete the following sentences describing how it feels to be one of these things:
I am a river and ... I am a bird and ... I am a stone and ...

- 2 Here are two poems written by primary school children. Which one do you prefer?

DREAMS

Dreams are majestic things,
They float around in the night
Searching for a sleeping child.
They fly around the sky so high
And hum so softly as they fly.
They blow through windows like a breeze
And give you lots of pleasant dreams

Time for a change

LIZA COOKE works for VSO, a voluntary charity organization. For the last three years she has taught English in a primary school in a small village in Nigeria. Before that she lived with her parents in a semi-detached house in Croydon, and worked in an office in north London. Her life changed dramatically after she decided to join VSO as a volunteer worker.

2 a Read the short text above about Liza Cooke.

b Complete the gaps in Liza's account of how her life has changed using used to and one of these verbs.

be travel go out hate have take put work

I¹ to work every day by train. The journey² between forty minutes and an hour. Now it only takes me a few minutes.

I³ in a large office with about thirty other people. Now I teach classes of up to fifty children. I still work indoors – well, more or less. The classroom has walls but no windows! I⁴ my office job. It was so boring. But teaching is so different – I really enjoy it.

Of course, working in an office and living at home meant that I⁵ a lot of free time. I⁶ every night of the week and enjoy myself. I never stayed at home. Now I find I have hardly any free time, but I don't mind. I seem to spend most of my free time doing chores like washing. When I lived at home I⁷ my dirty clothes in the laundry basket for mum to wash. Now I have to wash everything by hand myself.

I think this job has changed me a lot as a person. I⁸ very selfish. I never thought about anybody else.

2 Past simple

1 Put the verbs in brackets in the Past simple.

Last year I¹ (spend) Christmas in Sri Lanka. I² (go) with a friend. The flight³ (take) thirteen hours. When we⁴ (leave) London the weather⁵ (not be) very nice, but when we⁶ (arrive) in Sri Lanka, it⁷ (be) sunny and warm. I⁸ (not enjoy) the flight. I⁹ (watch) films some of the time, and some of the time I¹⁰ (sleep). But I¹¹ (not sleep) well. Thirteen hours later the plane¹² (land) at Colombo airport. We¹³ (get) a shock on our arrival in the capital. There¹⁴ (be) Christmas decorations everywhere. We had hoped to escape Christmas by going away. No such luck!

Sue

2 Use these prompts to ask Sue about her letter.

- Where/spend/Christmas/last/year?
Where did you spend Christmas last year?
- Who/go/holiday/with?

- When/plane/land/Colombo airport?
- Why/get/shock?

c Read Liza's answers then write in the questions using the verbs in brackets.

- Where did you use to work?* (work)
In an office in north London.
- to work? (travel)
By train.
-? (take)
Between 40 minutes and an hour.
- at home in the evenings? (stay)
No, never. I always went out.
- with your dirty clothes? (do)
Put them in the laundry basket for Mum to wash.

CHINESE NEW YEAR

The Chinese New Year takes place sometime between January 21 and February 20. Like most other traditional Chinese festivals its date depends on the Chinese lunar calendar, and changes from year to year.

In China, the New Year is very much seen as a time of new beginnings. For this reason, people believe that all debts should be paid and arguments resolved before the festivities even begin.

Houses are also cleaned from top to bottom with particular attention being paid to the kitchen. People believe that the kitchen god sends in a report to the 'higher authorities' on the family's behaviour over the past year. They want to encourage him to say nice things about them.

At this time of year there are also thought to be a lot of evil spirits around, so people set off firecrackers and paste large pictures of fierce-looking gods on doors and gates to frighten them off.

Before New Year's Eve people make their homes attractive by decorating them with flowers and plants, and hanging brightly-coloured decorations. Then on the evening itself all the family members gather at home to enjoy a special dinner, and see the New Year in together. Children are encouraged to stay awake until after midnight – the superstition is that if they go to sleep early they will have a short life.

On New Year's Day all the members of the family take a bath and put on new clothes. Everyone greets each other with the words 'Gong Xi Fa Cai', which means 'May prosperity be with you'.

Children are given gifts of money called 'lucky money' in red and gold envelopes. These are sometimes put underneath their pillow the night before. After enjoying the festive food, people visit their relatives and friends to wish them a happy and prosperous New Year.

Dear Emily,

Thanks for your letter which has come on Monday. It has been wonderful to hear about everything you've been doing. I'm really sorry that I haven't been writing to you for such a long time, but I was really busy for the last few months.

I've started my new job at the beginning of September and since then I worked non-stop. Three weeks ago I've been to Athens, and since then, I've flown to Istanbul, Madrid and Rome. I had no free time at all. But I shouldn't complain – it's been very exciting and completely different from life as a student.

I'll write again as soon as I can.

.....¹, a woman was driving home². She was feeling relaxed because there wasn't much traffic around³. But then she noticed something that looked like a little child lying⁴. She stopped, got out of the car, and ran to see if she could help.

When she got closer she saw that it was just a large life-like doll, so she went back⁵. As she got in, a dark car going quite slowly flashed its headlights at her. She thought she was in danger so she decided to hurry⁶⁷.

The dark car stayed close⁸. It flashed its lights repeatedly at her. There was no one at her home, so she decided to go⁹.¹⁰ the car was trying to overtake her, and the dark figure in the driving seat was waving his hands around aggressively. Finally, she stopped the car¹¹ and got out. The driver of the other car ran up to her and said, 'Wait. I was trying to warn you! When you stopped on the motorway, someone got in the back of your car.' Then they heard a noise and, as they looked round, they saw a thin man running off¹².

ON THE TRAIN TO DUBLIN Isabel had sat by the window and watched the country unrolling before her in the morning light like a canvas of mountains, lakes, rivers and fields. Everything delighted her, the little stations with single lines of men and women on the platforms, the suitcases on the luggage rack overhead, the men with their newspapers, the women who talked as they knitted, the boy in black trousers and white shirt who pushed a trolley down the aisle of the carriage and asked did she want tea or coffee. It seemed a never-ending journey but she never wanted to arrive. She wanted it to go on and on, whooshing into tunnels and out again, racing on past fields where men stopped to look and sometimes wave. She waved back against the glass.

A BOY YOUNGER THAN ME pushed a trolley down the aisle – a trail of toilet-goers behind him. His face was covered in spots. He sold me a plastic beef and cheese sandwich and I gave him a twenty. The plastic sandwiches came with plastic fruitcake and lukewarm watery tea.

The first woman tried to get past but the boy would not let her. No one would pass until he reached the end of the carriage. It was his everyday power, his moment in his cheap white shirt when he moved the trolley another few metres down the train, stopped again and took the next order. I wondered if it was how he measured his days because the journey meant nothing to him. He never arrived but went there and back across the landscape like a hare flashing over the fields. I was exactly like him I thought. Until today. Today I am desperate to arrive.

Read for pleasure

Read this excerpt from the book Terra Incognita – Travels in Antarctica by Sara Wheeler and answer the questions.

- 1 How does the writer feel about travelling?
- 2 Are you like Sara Wheeler, or are you more like the people who prefer to 'stay within hearing distance of the bells of the local church'?

When I was in Antarctica I met a scientist who had been working there. He was trying to get home for Christmas but the incoming plane had been delayed for the past two days. All he could do was stay close to his suitcases like a wasp around a jar of jam. He had been travelling for thirty years.

'I want to sit at home and think about it now,' he said. 'I want to ask myself why I went to all those places.'

I too often ask myself why. Was travel a journey of discovery for me or was it an escape route? I had never understood the appeal of staying within hearing distance of the bells of the local church – campanilismo they call it in Italy. Travelling gave me a new identity away from that place called home. But as everyone who has done it has discovered, you can run away as far as you like but you'll never get away from yourself.

I began travelling at the age of sixteen when I took a train to Paris with a friend. On the last day of the camping holiday in Paris I woke up in our small tent and I didn't feel sorry that it was over. I felt as if it had only just begun.

Seventeen years later, when I reached the South Pole, I had got as far geographically as anyone can go on this earth. Looking back it seemed like a natural conclusion to all the places that had preceded it. I thought about all the miles I had travelled since Paris. There were none I wished I hadn't travelled.

Read for pleasure

Read this extract from The Iron Man, a popular children's story by a famous modern British poet. Is the Iron Man large or small? As you read make a note of the words and phrases which tell you how big he is.

The Iron Man came to the top of the cliff. How far had he walked? Nobody knows. Where had he come from? Nobody knows. How was he made? Nobody knows.

Taller than a house, the Iron Man stood at the top of the cliff, on the very brink, in the darkness.

The wind sang through his iron fingers. His great iron head, shaped like a dustbin but as big as a bedroom, slowly turned to the right, slowly turned to the left. His iron ears turned, this way, that way. He was hearing the sea. His eyes, like headlamps, glowed white, then red, then infrared, searching the sea. Never before had the Iron Man seen the sea.

He swayed in the strong wind that pressed against his back. He swayed forward, on the brink of the high cliff.

And his right foot, his enormous iron right foot, lifted up, out, into space, and the Iron Man stepped forward, off the cliff, into nothingness.

CRRRAAAASSSSSH!
Down the cliff the Iron Man came toppling, head over heels.
CRASH!
CRASH!
CRASH!

From rock to rock, snag to snag, tumbling slowly. And as he crashed and crashed and crashed

His iron legs fell off.

His iron arms broke off, and the hands broke off the arms.

His great iron ears fell off and his eyes fell out.

His great iron head fell off.

All the separate pieces tumbled, scattered, crashing, bumping, clanging, down on to the rocky beach far below.

A few rocks tumbled with him.

Then

Silence.

Only the sound of the sea, chewing away at the edge of the rocky beach, where the bits and pieces of the Iron Man lay scattered far and wide, silent and unmoving.

From The Iron Man by Ted Hughes.

Read the article and answer these questions.

- 1 Are you more like the writer or Neill?
- 2 What things do you keep and why?

HOME THOUGHTS

MY HUSBAND, Neill, is a hoarder*. He keeps strange pieces of pottery that he bought in Crete at the age of 14, and hundreds of old cassettes that he never listens to. In fact, he keeps so many things that he forgets all about most of them – especially the things in cardboard boxes in the attic.

Anyway, last week I started one of my occasional complaints about how there was no room for me to live in the house, with Jamie's Lego and toy cars, and Neill's huge collection of useless objects, and I threatened to go and live in a very neat flat by myself. So, Neill looked in some of his boxes, and surprise, surprise, a collection of ancient letters was discovered.

This is a terrible thing for me to confess, but yes, I read them. Not all of them, but some, from an old teenage fiancée. I started by feeling guilty about being so nosy and a bit jealous. Then I got interested in their relationship and I ended up feeling that I knew this girl whom I had never met. I remembered what it felt like being 16 and I also recognised the 17-year-old boy she was writing to.

I haven't kept any of my old letters. I threw them away last year. This was a foolish thing to do – I should have been throwing away the pottery and the cardboard boxes if I'd really wanted to tidy the house. More importantly, especially on days like today, it would have been nice to be reminded of the time when I was just a girl with no children, no house and no Lego in sight.

From Home Thoughts by Justine Picardie

*a hoarder = someone who keeps things because they can't bear to throw them away

- 1 Read these two newspaper articles about music. Which article is factual? Which article gives the writer's own personal view?

A CAR CONCERTO

Stephen Montague conducting taxis in a rehearsal of his concerto for the modern music festival.

Sixteen taxis will today sound their horns, swish their windscreen-wipers and flash their lights in a new concerto to be performed as part of a nine-day festival of contemporary music in Manchester.

The black taxi-cabs will line up on the cobbled streets of Manchester's Town Hall and wait for Stephen Montague – composer and conductor of Horn Concerto for an Orchestra of Automobiles – to raise his baton.

The drivers have to coordinate the hooting of their horns and the movement of their windscreen wipers for most of the concerto, although the grand finale, which takes place to the release of hundreds of balloons, is total chaos.

The concerto is one of more than 60 events in the nine-day festival called unofficially 'The Olympics of contemporary music' with programmes in concert halls as well as on streets, canals, and under bridges.

The festival, celebrating the 75th anniversary of the International Society for Contemporary Music will also feature more orthodox works by Britten, Berg and Walton among others.

B Singing A LOST ART

It's not that we've become a less musical culture. These days there's more opportunity to hear music than ever before. There are more radio stations, more concerts. And music is so easily available too – on cassette tape, CD, and mini-disc. Thanks to Walkmans and car radios we need never move without music. And in many public places music follows us everywhere.

But what has changed is that nowadays most of us are simply passive consumers of music. On the whole, we leave the music-making to the professionals. On those rare occasions when we are asked to join in a song we do so reluctantly and with embarrassment. People still sing at football grounds. But nowadays most people will only sing in private – the bath and the shower are the most popular places – and when in the company of others most prefer to sing to themselves in their heads.

Our society is losing the art of singing and with it possibly some of the joy of living.

From Could these notes save your life?

Landmark is a general English course for adults and young adults available at two levels, Intermediate and Upper Intermediate. Interesting skills work, with a special focus on improving speaking and listening, is combined with grammar work which brings review and new input together, and vocabulary development. Activities develop the learner's ability to work independently, and maintain motivation by building on the knowledge that the learner brings to the course.

Key features

- ▶ skills work which helps learners to listen and read 'between the lines'
- ▶ interesting, fresh texts from authentic sources
- ▶ a discovery approach to grammar in context
- ▶ vocabulary development, with a focus on topics
- ▶ functional work to improve speaking strategies
- ▶ short extracts from real conversations to build confidence in listening
- ▶ a developmental writing syllabus
- ▶ clearly divided lesson sequences within each unit

Each level has a Student's Book with two Class cassettes, a Workbook and a Teacher's Book.

The Intermediate Workbook has practice of the grammar and vocabulary introduced in the Student's Book, plus a 'Read for pleasure' section. The Teacher's Book has detailed lesson notes and a full answer key, plus photocopiable practice materials and six tests.
